Have you ever been so deeply in love, that you would stand by your partner even though you knew that they were no good for you? Well Stacey has the same problem. She has caught her man Sean cheating on her, on more than one occasion. But she still can't find the strength to leave him behind. They have been together since their freshman year of high school, and he's the only person she's ever been in love with. She put up with his dishonesty in high school, but now that they are in college he's gotten worse. The lies are more frequent and it seems as if he doesn't care about hurting her anymore. Even though she is always hurting, Stacey is scared that it is too late to start another relationship. Besides who else would put up with her foolishness. So what's a girl to do? Stay and fight for her relationship or give up and try to find a new love?
