Want your own "Maker's Notebook"? If you're a DIY buff, you need a workshop notebook to flesh out your ideas and work with the tricky details. The editors of "MAKE Magazine" polled some of their favourite contributors and asked what they'd want in an ideal notebook. And they came up with real winner. "The Maker's Notebook" will take anything you throw at it - pencil sketches, notes and calculations, inked diagrams, pasted samples, watercolors, you name it, without tearing, buckling, or bleeding through. This notebook comes with a handsome, durable cover and an entire section of handy reference material. It's made to satisfy the specifications of people who rely on workshop notebooks for a living. It includes non-repro grid-printed pages that work well with media from mechanical pencils to India ink and paste-downs. This work offers reference sections that includes electronics symbols, Ohm's law, resistor codes, weights, and measures, common tech abbreviations, screw/bolt sizing chart, and more. It helps you keep track of your ideas and document your progress.
