Medicare audits are a fact of life for health care providers that serve Medicare beneficiaries. Medicare processes over one billion medical claims every year, and in fiscal 2004, Medicare contractors denied over 158 million Medicare claims. For those who are charged with overseeing the reimbursement appeals process, the system can seem complex and confusing.

Anyone who submits Medicare claims and receives Medicare reimbursements needs to be fully prepared to follow the appeals process when claims are rejected and/or refunds are requested.
