This warm and touching new play from Ireland about death, loneliness, and love is classic Conor McPherson, full of recognizable characters that have been knocked around by life. Katherine's life has come to a standstill. Her husband, Tom, has left her for a younger woman and her once-glamorous mother Dorothy is slowly losing her mind. As Dorothy's condition worsens, Katherine's stepfather and a new nurse rally to support her. Then Tom appears with a sudden announcement that sets them all off on an unexpected journey deep into rural Ireland.
