Deception is a central feature of everyday life. We hear it not only from Presidents ("I did not have sexual relations with that woman"), the dean of admissions of M.I.T. ("I have three college degrees"), or the sleazy sales associate at the local car dealership ("This SUV gets terrific mileage!"); we also hear lies from the people we meet and interact with on a daily basis, including our family, friends, colleagues-and yes, the woman ahead of us in line at Starbucks.

The issue confronting us is not whether people lie to us-they do-but how much and why. Just as importantly, we need to consider why we're so prone to believe the deception we hear from others, as well as the lies we tell ourselves. Finally, we need to explore why we view certain lies as harmless, while rejecting others as manipulative and shameful. Robert Feldman has unique knowledge of how deeply dishonesty is engrained in our everyday lives and broader culture.

很新的一本书，里面的例子非常新、比如08奥运假唱、荒野求生之类的。这本书的涉及面比较广【其实正经的应对部分倒真无足轻重，作者关注的是欺骗本身】，从发展心理学和心理动力的角度分别对造假进行解读、感情出轨、印象管理、学历造假、媒体造假、乃至网络造假都有所涉及。 ...
