Over 10,000 German Jews fought in the allied armies of World War II, and this book collects individual stories straight from the veteran's mouths. Containing twenty-seven interviews with those brave European-born Jewish combat veterans on World War II who faced their persecutors by joining the American and British armies in the fight against the country of their birth. Offering a unique view of the harrowing experience of German and Austrian Jews fighting the Axis in North Africa and Europe, this book is a testament to heroism, resilience, and courage.
