Louis is obsessed with airplanes of all kinds, from wide-bodied jets to tiny model aircraft. When he sees his friend Toby playing with the most wonderful toy biplane, Louis can't resist "borrowing" it. His first pretend flight is amazing as he soars high above the clouds . . . until guilt plummets Louis right back to Earth. Suddenly, he can't bear to look at the plane and hides it in his bedroom. How can he give the plane back to Toby without telling him what he's done? Will Toby ever forgive him? Louis' dilemma is one all young readers can identify with and learn from.
