1919. After a bitter argument with her sister, Tilly Moran decides to move across the Mersey to Liverpool, where she makes friends with Wendy Wright, whose mother has a room to rent. Once settled Tilly works, not just for much-needed money, but also for inspiration for the novel she intends to write. Working undercover for Grant Simpson's detective agency brings her into contact with the seedier side of Liverpool, and she uncovers rather more than she bargained for. She attracts the attention of not one, but two admirers, but she can never quite forget Don, who saved her brother-in-law during the war...
