Praise for previously published volumes in the Longman Annotated English Poets edition The Poems of Browning collection: "...thorough: a delight for buffs." The Guardian "Woolford and Karlin are meticulous readers of Browning...Longman's notes more amply supplement the poet's eventual desire to be of assistance to his readers." The Times Literary Supplement Robert Browning (1812-1889) is considered to be one of the foremost Victorian poets and this is the foremost edition to read him in. This third volume will focus on the poetry written by Browning during his marriage to the poet Elizabeth Barrett Browning. It will start with The Guardian Angel, the first poem known to have been written by Browning after his marriage, and will end with Browning's adaptation of an epigram by Walter Savage Landor, An Angel from his Paradise Drove Adam, the last poem which can be certainly dated before his wife's death.
