People often wonder if others who go through a traumatic experience, like a coma, see the light or if they remember anything from their sleep. A lot of times the answer is no. Is that the whole story or the only story they wish to share? Delve into Tammy's psyche and behold her many adventures. This is a suspenseful story; more importantly it makes the reader want to keep reading. This story makes the imagination come to life. I wrote this story with the hope of captivating the mind and getting the reader into the character's life. It shows life from a nightmare's perspective. It starts as a romance and then becomes a nightmare. Or is it a reality of unreality? Is the end really the end, or a new beginning?
