Every day, new examples emerge that confirm the predictive power of the new dimension of time where simultaneous events determine the world that we experience. This 2008 version includes several new cases and ideas that show the practical relevance of a time- and behavior-inspired study of being. Cases ranging from snowflake growth and nuclear-fusion research to corporate leadership underline the broad application of the statement in this book, a must read for leaders of thought in the world of business, government, and science.
