"Using Social Theory in Educational Research" is organised to help practising educators and novice researchers who have little familiarity with social theory to: be introduced to major schools of social theory, their basic concepts, and their general applicability to educational issues; develop an understanding of and appreciation for its potential to improve their own practice; gain practical insight into how theory can function as a warrant, or support, for data interpretation through the use of multiple practical examples, learn how to integrate theory into their own; and, work more effectively. The selected contents include: Getting Theoretical; An Illustrated Tour of How Theory Works (and Doesn't Work) in Educational Research; Framing Research Theoretically, Part One: Planning and Data Collection; Framing Research Theoretically; and, When Research Meets Research.
