After signing his first professional contract as a 21-year-old in the living room of his parents' home in Oregon, Johnny Pesky spent the better part of the last seven decades with the Boston Red Sox. He has seen it all--from the heartache of 1946, 1978, and 1986 to 2004, when that heartache finally ended for Red Sox fans with their first World Series title in 86 years. It was Pesky, along with Carl Yastrzemski, who raised the championship banner on Fenway Park's centerfield flag pole to open the 2005 season. Pesky has worn the Red Sox uniform longer than anyone and has served the Sox in virtually every capacity: All-Star player, coach, manager, broadcaster, goodwill ambassador, and all-around good guy. He has been given the unofficial title of Mr. Red Sox. Fabled Fenway Park, the hallowed home to the Red Sox since 1912, will always bear his name, as the right-field foul pole was christened the Pesky Pole on September 27, 2006, Pesky's 87th birthday. Now, Pesky shares his observations of the 2007 championship season, from the unparalleled press conference introducing new Japanese pitcher Daisuke Matsuzaka on December 14, 2006, to the final out of the world series, offering a Pesky perspective on players, fans, media, and the high and low points of an unforgettable season. Take a seat in the dugout beside the legendary Mr. Red Sox and listen in as he shares his thoughts on all the events of the exciting 2007 Red Sox season.
