Somewhere between prose poem and sacred incantation lies "Bicycle." In spare, comically surreal and beautiful prose, Paul Fattaruso does for bicycles what Richard Brautigan did for trout--he elevates them to the status of an idol. An intimate, inventive, and vibrant book. Paul Fattaruso is the author of "Travel in the Mouth of the Wolf." His work has appeared in "Volt," "Jubilat," "Fence," "Black Warrior Review," "Another Chicago Magazine," "The Tiny," and others. He lives in Massachusetts with his wife Kristin and his son Max. He rides a silver bicycle.
