Hidden across the United States, scattered among hundreds of cities, are real estate markets that are still aggressively appreciating and investment properties that are still producing thousands of dollars of annual income for their owners. Contrary to the headlines and the "experts," there is no "national" real estate market. All real estate is local. There are hundreds of real estate markets, and each of these markets has opportunities concealed within them. Marketopoly reveals not only how to quickly and accurately identify these unseen investment opportunities and have them unfold before you, but also how to capitalize on them. Marketopoly has the information that real estate investors need in times of change. Investment real estate will never look the same.
