Thinking about development in Africa requires an appreciation of at least two sets of ideas. It is not sufficient to stress the ubiquity of failure, malnutrition, disease, predatory states and war; one also has to recognize that important aspects of the lives of millions of ordinary people have been transformed over the last five decades. The contributions in this book are rooted in extensive empirical research at local, regional and/or national level in different African countries, including Chad, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, South Africa and Uganda, while some take a pan-African perspective. All give insight, from different analytical perspectives, into the heterogeneity of poverty and development processes in Sub-Saharan Africa, and confront the ideas, concepts and assumptions that lie behind pro-poor policies with their empirical findings. In this way, this book also aims to induce policy makers to make more realistic policy prescriptions that will move people out of poverty.
