Shelter centers on a young man, Zach, in San Pedro, California, who gives up on his dream of art school in order to provide for his family, consisting of his aging father and his young nephew Cody, whose mother Jeanne has decided her priorities lie elsewhere. When his best friend's brother Shaun returns to town, Zach finds in him a friend and confidant. As Zach becomes increasingly attracted to Shaun, their casual surfing relationship turns into much more, setting off a chain of events that forces Zach to choose between continuing to put others first or fighting for what he wants for himself. Patrick Ryan is a novelist living in New York.
