Accountability is not a consequence ... it's your competitive advantage Early in the Minnesota Twins 2009 exhibition season, Twins manager Ron Gardenhire discovered a note on his desk from Justin Morneau, his star first baseman. It read: "Gardie: I forgot to run sprints after the workouts yesterday; I am fining myself." Next to the note was a hundred-dollar bill. Entrepreneur, author, and speaker Sam Silverstein asks: Is Justin Morneau accountable because he's a superstar or is he a superstar because he's accountable? In "No More Excuses," Silverstein identifies the Five Accountabilities shared by all truly successful people and organizations. - Shows why accountability gives businesses and individuals the competitive edge - How to instill accountability throughout the enterprise - How the Five Accountabilities can support both values and strategic intent. - Includes interviews with 50 carefully chosen Accountability Masters from six continents and all walks of life--including academics, Fortune 500 CEOs, and Hall of Fame athletes. "No More Excuses" also features on-line resources for implementing and reinforcing each of the Five Accountabilities on a daily basis. Read it--and expand your own Accountability Zone
