Outside, the moon shines with a reddish haze, and howling winds knock out power lines. Trees scrape the side of your house; something's scratching the closet door...a big something. Gather your flashlights and suit up for the unspeakable, for you will surely find it in the closets of Blood Moons and Nightscapes: -A little gray man who inspires fear, and with good reason. No one he approaches lives longer than a few days... -And the people living underneath the sewers with blood red eyes, who are seeking retribution and exact their revenge in human flesh... -And nurses whose flair for torturing the elderly make Colin Norris seem like Florence Nightingale. -And grim-faced enemy soldiers who kill by twilight, competing with poisonous snakes and other vermin... -And the computers at Memorial Hospital-impressive and reliable equipment until someone starts using them to delete people... You'll find it all in Blood Moons and Nightscapes.
