My name is Luanne Trejo. I was born in Pontiac, Michigan. My father is a preacher. My mother is a Sunday school teacher. When I was a young child, my parents ran a mission for the homeless. These are the places I have been able to draw a lot of my writing from. The things I have written about in this book are all things I have witnessed or personally gone through in my life, from the loss of a child to just being able to be comfortable in my own skin and trying to live life. So when you read a poem and you feel like I am telling a story, it is because I am a story.
