"The Routledge Companion to News and Journalism Studies" is an authoritative, comprehensive treatment of the diverse forms of the news media, including newspapers, radio, television, news magazines, photojournalism, online news and beyond. Entries are written by an outstanding team of international contributors and provide students and scholars of journalism studies and related disciplines with a critical, historically informed guide to news media and journalism studies. Additional features include annotated further reading, a general introduction and section introductions by the editor and a comprehensive index.
