Tallyho! The Hunt is afoot! Be a hunter—not road kill. April 1 marks the official opening of Hunting Season, when available women should be heading out into the rural, urban, and suburban wild to bag themselves a prize buck. You might not need a literal gun to bring down a good man—but you do need good technique, appropriate gear, and plenty of practice. Within these pages, successful hunter Elle shares the foolproof strategies she's adapted from rules that have been polished and honed over many centuries for successful bagging of prize big game. The Hunt can be exciting, exhilarating, and rewarding . . . if you do it right! No matter what kind of modern man you've got in your sights—a Stag, a Tree Scratcher, or a 6-Point Buck—here are all the skills you need to bring him down. Are you Trophy Hunting, or do you want to Bag 'n' Tag? Your strategies will be different depending on your goal—so define it before the season opens. Never hunt with a posse. It's no fun sharing a kill. Stick to your Kill Zone. A wild buck's movements can't be controlled—so if he wanders let him roam. Another buck will put himself in your sights soon enough. November 1-March 31 is Off-Season: A time for hibernation, emotional healing, and gun polishing.
