Brian is land surveyor sent on a job to a remote area of southeast Arizona for a month-long work assignment. There he meets Angel, a college student, home for the summer and helping his family with their campground-style motel where Brian stays. Brian realizes that he's jumped into relationships a little too quickly in the past, but finds it very hard to resist Angel, who's just his type. Even though he knows he should take it slow, Brian can't seem to stay away. Angel has a secret though. He's a werewolf. Not only that, the werewolf gene is triggered by having sex for the first time. Angel is 'unleashed' when he and Brian have sex. Can Brian come to terms with being in love with the most powerful werewolf rural Arizona has seen in decades? And will Angel be able to fit into Brian's urban lifestyle? Or will a series of misunderstandings, hurt feelings and bruised egos keep them apart?
