作者介绍:

Antonius Otto Hermannus (Toon) Tellegen (born in Brielle, November 18, 1941) is a Dutch writer, poet, and physician, known for his children's works, especially those involving anthropomorphised ants and squirrels. His writings are also enjoyed by adults, due to the amusing, bizarre situations that Tellegen creates, as well as their dealings with philosophical subjects.

Tellegen studied medicine at the University of Utrecht, and worked as a general practitioner in Amsterdam. After writing for many years mainly for adults, Tellegen switched to children's stories. His first children's book, written in 1984, was called Er ging geen dag voorbij: negenenveertig verhalen over de eekhoorn en de andere dieren. (Not A Day Went By: forty-nine tales of the squirrel and other animals). In these stories, the ant and the squirrel often play the lead role, and many of his stories touch on philosophical concepts.

Tellegen still writes today.
