In all of the South Asian subcontinent, Bengal was the region most receptive to the Islamic faith. This area today is home to the world's second-largest Muslim ethnic population. How and why did such a large Muslim population emerge there? And how does such a religious conversion take place? Richard Eaton uses archaeological evidence, monuments, narrative histories, poetry, and Mughal administrative documents to trace the long historical encounter between Islamic and Indic civilizations. Moving from the year 1204, when Persianized Turks from North India annexed the former Hindu states of the lower Ganges delta, to 1760, when the British East India Company rose to political dominance there, Eaton explores these moving frontiers, focusing especially on agrarian growth and religious change.

Hatcher | Good overview of Bengali history from the 1200s to the 1600s. Decent analysis of the political, social, and economic aspects of Islamicization in Bengal, but the chapter on the spiritual and cultural aspects of Islamicization of Bengal (Ch. 10) seems quite a bit "other-ing," thus inadequate and unconvincing. Cf. Wilfred Cantwell Smith.
